VISIT TO FASHODA.

Experiences on White Nile Described by Sir Edmund Lechmere.

Some interesting particulars have been published of the journey up the White Nile recently undertaken by Sir Edmund and Lady Lechmere. The latter is the only Englishwoman that has visited Fashoda except Lady Baker, who accompanied her husband on his famous expedition to the Nile sources. Sir Edmund and Lady Lechmere left Khartoum in November last for Fashoda, the Sobat, and Gondokoro, in two large sailing nuggers, and reached Fashoda early in January. The heat during the journey was intense, and there was a perfect plague of mosquitoes. Concerning the trip Sir Edmund Lechmere says:

The banks of the White Nile for hundreds of miles are fringed with dense masses of reeds, and landing is almost impossible except at the very few disembarkation places. The boats being low in the water, it is impossible to see over the tops of these reeds, and on landing we have generally to push through half a mile of dense vegetation and swamp before reaching dry land. In the wet season the country is a huge swamp. Fashoda, though an important post, is a dreary and desolate collection of huts and tents reeking with malaria and mosquitoes. After remaining a few days we proceeded to the mouth of the Sobat, where I had a bad attack of fever, and we had to abandon our idea of pushing on to Gondokoro. We found the Shilluks and Dinkas on the right bank of the Sobat friendly, but useless as camp attendants. The Nairs, on the opposite bank, were very truculent, and any one going among them must be prepared for trouble. South of Fashoda we found that the natives of both sexes were quite destitute of clothing. Old "sparklets" are in great demand for necklaces, and even a more valuable asset for purposes of barter than beads.

On the journey up to the Sobat we encountered all sorts of birds, chiefly water-fowl, in countless thousands; and for days we sailed through flocks of geese, pelicans, and the like, which scarcely troubled to paddle out of the way of our boats. Hippopotami and crocodiles are numerous, and there are several species of antelope, including the Cobus Maria, of which I got a fine specimen. The fish in the White Nile run up to several hundred pounds in weight, and huge water turtles are to be met with. I caught one weighing nearly 100 pounds.

During our journey we had abundant evidence of the benefit the country is deriving from British influence. The land is beginning to be cultivated, and the natives, freed from centuries of tyranny, are awaking from their apathy. The great want of the Soudan is population.

More Profitable.
The "anti-daisy bill," introduced into the New York State Assembly, provided that the daisy be classed as a detrimental, together with the wild carrot, the common Canada thistle and the wild lettuce; and that if a farmer did not dig up these weeds the tax assessors were empowered to enter the farm, dig them up and charge the expense to the farmer, along with his taxes.

Recently, according to the New York Tribune, this bill was the subject of conversation between a city and a country assemblyman.
"Do you think that such a bill is a good bill?" asked the city member.
"The daisy is one of the most beautiful flowers that we have, exquisite in its simplicity."
"That may be," replied the country member. "It is beautiful to look at, but it ruins a crop of hay."
"But if you dig up our daisies what will our poets do?"
"I raise hay, if they're wise. What kind of a show does a poet stand, anyway? At the present time a bale of hay brings a good deal higher price than the same amount of verse."

Why Old Plates and Houses Don't Rent.
Real estate men and owners should not overlook the fact that the Lake View Gas Fixture Company, 233 Lincoln avenue, Telephone North 708, refinish old chandeliers, making them equal to new at very small cost. In many cases after expending money for calcimining or papering, the chandeliers are left in the same dirty, fly-specked condition as before, and are not in keeping with the new decorations, thereby spoiling that which has been done, when at a very small cost the chandeliers, brackets, etc., can be refinished equal to new. We refinish in all the latest colors, such as polished brass, gilt, rich gilt, old copper, polished copper, oxidized copper, silver and gold.

We are also makers of a fine line of gas fixtures at prices to suit the times. Call up North 708. Our agent will call and estimate.
